ADMINISTRATIVE LAW JUDGE'S RECOMMENDED DECISION AND ORDER

On February 24, 2005, the CTA Trade Coalition (Charging Party or Coalition), filed a charge with the State Panel of the Illinois Labor Relations Board, (Board) pursuant to the Illinois Public Labor Relations Act, 5 ILCS 315 (2004) (Act), as amended, and the Rules and Regulations of the Illinois Labor Relations Board, 80 Ill. Adm. Code, Sections 1200 through 1230 (Rules) alleging that the Chicago Transit Authority (Respondent or CTA) had violated Section 10(a)(4) and (1) of the Act. The charges were investigated in accordance with Section 11 of the Act and, on the Section 10 the Executive Director of the Board issued a Complaint for Hearing.

A hearing was held on February 7, 2006, in Chicago, Illinois, at which time all parties appeared and were given a full opportunity to participate, present evidence, examine witnesses, argue orally and file written briefs. After full consideration of the parties' stipulations, evidence, arguments and briefs, and upon the entire record of the case, I recommend the following.

EXHIBIT B

I. PRELIMINARY FINDINGS

The parties stipulate, and I find as follows:

- At all times material, the Respondent has been a public employer within the meaning of Section 3(o) of the Act.
- At all times material, the Respondent has been subject to the Act pursuant to Section 5(b) and Section 20(b) of the Act.
- 3. At all times material, the Charging Party has been a coalition of collective bargaining representatives for separate historic bargaining units of trades employees of Respondent (units) and is itself a labor organization within the meaning of Section 3(i) of the Act.

II. CONTENTIONS OF THE PARTIES

For years, the CTA had different written correctional guidelines for different groups of its employees. On March 1, 2005, the CTA, unilaterally and without bargaining, initiated a single correctional guidelines for its employees including those represented by Coalition unions and a new, separate vehicle safety guidelines.

The Coalition contends that these agreement and thus concern a mandators subject of bargaining, that the CTA's refusal to bargain prior to implementation of the guidelines violates Section 10(a) (4) and (1) of the Act and that the Coalition did not waive its right to bargain over changes to the guidelines.

The CTA insists that it has inherent managenial authority to set disciplinary guidelines to enforce its standards of service. Alternatively, the CTA argues that its refusal to negatiate guidelines is not an unfair labor practice because every agreement with Coalition members contains a non-interference clause which states that the union will in no way interfere with or limit the right of the authority to discharge or discipline its employees where sufficient cause can be shown. The CTA considers that a waiver of any right to bargain.

The CTA also contends that unions have otherwise waived any right to bargain, noting that unions can grieve and arbitrate disciplinary matters. Prior to the instant case, no union has ever negotiated, grieved or questioned the then existing guidelines. By failing to challenge the then-existing guidelines, the CTA urges, the Caalition weived any right to bargain the CTA's new guidelines. Finally, the CTA argues that it would be extremely burdensome and cumbersome if it had to negotiate guidelines with each of the unions that represent CTA employees.

III. FINDINGS OF FACT

Approximately 10:000 GFV employees are represented by unions. The CTA bargains with 16-amions, in a familiar members of the Coalition. It also bargains with a 17th union, Local 1 of the Ironworkers Union as part of an employer's association. Besides the Coalition, the CTA bargains with the Amalgamated Transit Union (ATE); Local 241 representing 6:200 members; the ATU Local 508 representing 2400 rail employees; the Teamsters Local 726; the International Association of Machinists; Local 701, the Mechanics Union; and IBEW Local 134, in a unit other than the Coalition unit.

Members of the Coalition, representing about 1.100 employees, include International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers Union (IBEW), Local 134; Upholstery and Allied Industries Division of the United Steelworkers of America, Local Union #9777; IBEW Local #9; Chicago, Journeyman Plumbers Local Union #130; Sheetmetal

Workers International Association Local Union #115; International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers District #8; Metal Polishers, Sign Pictorial & Display, Automotive Equipment Painters, Production & Novelty Workers Local Union #8A-28A; Pipefitters' Association Local Union #597; International Brotherhood of Boilermakers, Iron Ship Builders, Blacksmiths, Forgers and Helpers Local Lodge #1247; Chicago and Northeast Illinois District Council, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America; and United Order of American Bricklayers and Stone Masons, Local Union #21.

The most recent agreements between the CTA and members of the Coalition were effective January 1, 2000 to December 31, 2003. Under those agreements, employees subject to progressive discipline have certain rights. Negotiations for a new agreement between the parities began around the end of 2003.

CTA Guidelines

The The late of Conduct that all CTA employees are expected to follow. The current version of the Rule Book has been in use since October 1989. The CTA did not negotiate the current Rule Book with any unions and did not negotiate prior versions of the Rule Book. No union has ever grieved implementation of the Rule Book or sought changes in its content.

The CTA first implemented guidelines for its Rule Book in 1978. The guidelines were called "Superintendent's Procedures." The guidelines were used to educate supervisors on how to discipline employees. The guidelines addressed such topics as the procedures for correcting employees, issuing verbal and written warnings, interviewing employees, handling employees who are unfit for duty. The CTA did not negotiate the guidelines with any unions and, after their implementation, no union grieved their implementation.

At the time the guidelines were introduced, the Amalgamated Transit Union (ATU) took the position that it did not want to negotiate guidelines. The ATU believed its position in arbitration would be weakened because the CTA could argue that the guidelines were reasonable because the CTA and the ATU had negotiated them.

After the Coalition came into existence, the CTA issued revised guidelines effective January 1, 1995.² The gaidelines applies it all transportation dispartment employees including units represented by the GRA Coalition that had members who worked in the shops. There were different guidelines for different groups of employees. The CTA issued corrective action guidelines for its Construction, Engineering and Maintenance Division, effective August 1, 1997, and for its Materials and Information Management Group and Revenue Equipment Technology and Maintenance Department, effective May 1, 1998. It did not negotiate any of these guidelines with the unions representing the affected employees and those unions did not file grievances or unfair labor practices regarding any changes in the guidelines.

In 2004, the CTA decided to implement the same guidelines for elimination and consistency. The CTA had had between 8 and 12 separate guidelines for its various departments: service, delivery, security services, revenue equipment and technology, communications, facilities maintenance, and the law department. Additionally, its law department wanted a system of accident determination that would decrease the CTA's exposure to liability for accidents. For that reason, the CTA decided to also issue and apply new and separate vehicle accident guidelines for all its employees.

Another factor leading to the decision to have guidelines applicable to all employees was the CTA's new practice of rotating managers among its various departments. Previously, a manager might stay in one department. To make the disciplinary process uniform and understandable for its managers, the CTA decided to put all unionized employees under one set of guidelines.

In a letter dated. Approx 25, 2004. Robert Gient GTA View President of Employer Relations, informaster embers of the GTA Coalition that the GTA would be implementing competitive action guidelines and vehicle accident guidelines on Reptonham 1, 2007. Copies of those guidelines were attached to the letter. In the letter, Gierut invited the union representatives to contact him if they had any questions. Several unions did so and asked for an opportunity to discuss the content and application of the guidelines. For that reason, the CTA delayed implementation of the guidelines and scheduled a meeting that was held on September 23, 2004 at the IBEW Local 9's apprentice school.

Representing members of the Coalition at the September 23, 2004 meeting were Laura Foster, John Glatz, Jim Kasmer, John Burkhard, and Mike Fedanzo, Robert Gierut represented the CTA. Going into the meeting, Coalition members believed that if they explained their concerns about the unilateral changes that would open the door for negotiations regarding the guidelines. However, there were no negotiations at that meeting.

The meeting started with a Coalition request that the CTA negotiate changes in the guidelines. Gierut made it clear that the CTA was meeting for discussion of the guidelines and not to negotiate. Coalition members provided examples of the impact of the new guidelines regarding, absenteeism, tardiness and absences without leave. The Continon noted differences between situations involving accleament and situations involving other CTA employees. Gierut responded that the guidelines were written to deal with the 3 to 5 percent of employees who were bad or poor employees and accounted for 80 percent of all discipline. The union representatives responded that they did not like the CHA presentatives stop-frametherpresses, a change that could put their members at risk of losing a day or days' pay earlier in the process. Gierut said that historically the CTA had never negotiated changes in the corrective action guidelines. However, Gierut reviewed the entire guidelines with Coalition members and explained changes. At the end of the meeting, the Coalition was still hopeful that there would be dialogue and consideration of negotiations. The CTA's only response was that it would implement the guidelines at a later date. However, it was not clear to the Coalition that the CTA would in fact implement the changed guidelines. The Coalition did not at that meeting or thereafter submit a proposal regarding the new guidelines because it merely wanted the previous guidelines to remain in effect.

In a letter to Gierut dated October 22, 2004, the Coalition stated that the new guidelines primarily applied to ATU bargaining units but not to Coalition employees. It requested separate guidelines for its own members and asked that it have an opportunity to review any new guidelines before implementation. Gierut responded in a letter dated November 18, 2005, stating that the CTAP's guidelines would apply to all transplining unit

For the Continue, one of the most significant changes in the corrective action guidelines was the elimination of a stor in many of the different categories for constitute aution. Previously, the first step was a waiten warrang, the sagand-step was a fine-written warrang, the third-step was a one day suspension, then a consention asset interview, and fine-live resourcedation for discharge. The CTA eliminated the final written warrang and thus proceeded from a written warrang to a one day suspension at the second step instead of the third step.

The Coalition complains about a change regarding injuries as the CTA eliminated the injury-on-duty category and combined it with a safety category to create a new and different category. Any time someone is injured, however slightly, the CTA interprets it as a safety violation.

Under the new guidelines, an employee is subject to discipline regardless of fault.

A change was that categories that were separate under previous guidelines such as terdiness and illness are presently imaged together in one category accelerating disciplinary procedures. Under the previous guidelines, the CTA had deemed a 3 to 5 percent absenteeism rate acceptable based on 20 workdays per month and 12 months per year. Under the revised guidelines, only a 3 percent rate was acceptable. Under the previous guidelines, employees were allowed a 2.9 percent absenteeism rate before a one-day suspension which amounted to 7 occurrences. Under the new guidelines, the CTA reduced the absenteeism rate to 1.6 percent which amounted to 4 occurrences."

In previous guidelines regarding attendance, the GFA-treated-employees in the trades differently from bus drivers and train operators. Initially, the guidelines addressed employees who operated buses and trains. The functions of Coalition employees are not as time sensitive as they do not directly deal with the public.

Kasmer, the Carpernter's Union representative, explained the practical impact of the new guidelines. Kasmer represents employees in disciplinary interviews. An employee who was in the bus heavy maintenance division was initially disciplined under the new guidelines for two incidents of tardiness and an early departure over a 12 month period and received a written warning. After he had two more incidents, the employee was suspended for one day. Under the old guidelines the employee would have been allowed one more incident before the suspension.

The Enhance 21 2005 Meeting

On Rebrusty 22, 2005, the Coalition regeived multiple annual and implementation of new guidelines on Manual 2005. At a collective bargaining negotiation session the next day on February 23, 2005, the Coalition again brought up the subject of the guidelines. Present for the Coalition was Mangaret Angaluscia John Burkhard, Robert Pierson, Laura Foster, John Glatz and several other Coalition representatives. Present for the CTA were Daley, Stevens, Donovan, Gierut and Maloney. During a caucus with the Coalition, Angelucoi learned that the day before members of the Coalition had each received a letter from Gierut announcing implementation of the guidelines on March 1, 2005. When the returned to the negotiation session, Angaluscia stated transfer guidelines. The Coalition did not make a proposal regarding the guidelines because it wanted to keep in effect the previous guidelines. Daley responded that the past practice was that guidelines were composed without input from the unions and the CTA was not about to start bargaining them. According to Daley, the CTA only gave notice to the Coalition of changes in guidelines.

According to Gierut, safety and absenteeism are cost factors for the CTA in terms of claims for damages and lost time especially in light of the CTA's ongoing financial crisis.

The guidelines was implemented in Marsh 1995. The CTA did not amend the guidelines to reflect the Coalition's concerns and has never indicated a willingness to bargain guidelines. Gierut, whose office is involved in discipline and discharge cases, has not noticed any increase in discipline since implementation of the guidelines. He believes that negotiating guidelines would be a burden because the CTA has 17 bargaining units annually in about a dozen such cases. About half of them involve performance violations, absenteeism and safety issues.

The primary epokestian for the Coalition in collective bargaining negotiations is the entire anticlet. Margaret Angelucci is the secondary spokesperson. Representatives of individual unions within the Coalition include Bob Pierson and John Burkard from Local 9; Jim Kasmer from the Chicago Regional Council of Carpenters; Mike Fedanzo from Local 134, IBEW, John Agrella from Local 73, Sheet Metal Workers Local Union #115; Laura Foster and John Glatz from the Painters' Union #8A-28A, McManus from the Plumbers Local Union #130; Fabian from the Boilermakers' Lodge #1247, Thompson from the Bricklayers' Local #21; Harrison Mailey from the Upholstery Local Union #9777; and Carl Gallman from the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers District 8.

and negotiations could result in 17 different guidelines. In Gierut's opinion, that would make discipline a convoluted and burdensome process that would not be uniform and would confuse managers. However, there is no evidence in the record as to how prior differing guidelines confused managers or resulted in a burdensome process. There is also no record evidence as to why managers, upon rotation, could not be instructed on different guidelines.

The Agreement

The non-interference climas in the CTA's agreements with Coalition members provides in pertinent part as follows:

The Union agrees that it will in no way interfere with or limit the right of the Authority to discharge or discipline its employees where sufficient cause can be shown....

It is expressly agreed that all rights and powers of management are retained by, reserved to and exclusively vested in the Authority, including but not limited to the right to plan, direct, curtail, determine and control the employer's operations, hire, suspend, discipline or discharge for proper cause, layoff, transfer, to promote efficiency, to contract or subcontract and all rights customarily exercised by an employer, except as may be specifically limited by this Agreement, are vested in the Authority.

IV. DISCUSSION AND ANALYSIS

The issue in this case is whether the CTA refused to bargain in violation of Section 10(a)(4) and (1) of the Act when it refused to negotiate with the Coalition regarding the changes it made in its guidelines issued March 1, 2005. Section 7 of the Act requires parties to bargain collectively regarding the employees' wages, hours and other conditions

¹³ Section 7 provides in pertinent part as follows:

A public employer and the exclusive representative have the authority and the duty to bargain collectively set forth in this Section.

For the purposes of this Act, "to bargain collectively" means the performance of the mutual obligation of the public employer or his designated representative and the representative of the public employees to meet at reasonable times, including meetings in advance of the budget-making process, and to negotiate in good faith with respect to wages, hours, and other conditions of employment, not excluded by Section 4 of this Act, or the negotiation of an agreement, or any question arising thereunder and the execution of a written contract incorporating any agreement reached if requested by either party, but such obligation does not compel either party to agree to a proposal or require the making of a concession,

The Respondent's described plants and guidelines made the process of the Central City/Behvidere analysis because it a fant the process have not remained to the disciplinary process means that an employee would be suffered to the injury on duty category and its combination with a safety category means that the CTA would more severely discipline an employee or discharge an employee sooner.

Further, the Respondent's charges in the guidelines does not the property of t

The confine and analysis and the Respondent's changes in the guidelines had been a restrict of inhomatic analysis and burdens of bargaining. I would still an interest have the confit from bargaining because their functions are not as time-sensitive as those of employees directly providing scheduled transportation services to the public. Thus, the Coalition could argue, for example, that penalties for absenteeism and tardiness for its members should not be as severe as for employees who operate buses and trains. The Coalition by its specific knowledge of its members may be in a unique position to devise penalties that deter and appropriately punish misconduct. Cf. Chicago Park District, 18 PERI [3026 (IL LRB-LP 2002) aff d Chicago Park District v. Illinois Labor Relations Board and Service Employees International Union, Local 73, 20 PERI 145 (2004), cert denied, Illinois

Supreme Court, October 6, 2004. (employer committed unfair labor practice where it unilaterally reduced employees' hours; union could have proposed ways to address budget outs that minimized impact on employees).

The Respondent has also failed to establish that requiring it to bargain regarding its guidelines would have imposed a significant burden on its authority. The Respondent recites that it would be easier for its managers if discipline was uniform for all unionized employees. However, I do not deem any inconvenience to the CTAs' managers to outweigh the Coalition members' interest in a disciplinary policy tailored to their peculiar working conditions. Moreover, the CTA operated under differently tailored policies of its own devising throughout its history. Thus, had it been necessary to apply the third part of the Central City/ Belvidere analysis, I would have determined that the balance of interests clearly favors bargaining. It would have determined that the Respondent's changes in its guidelines was a matter of inherest managerial authority, it was that may be the coalition of the Respondent was required to bargain prior to implementation.

The CTA advances two arguments that the Coalition was any right to bargain changes in the guidelines. First, the CTA contends that the manifestate allows in its agreements with members of the Coalition grant. The Salasine right to discipline and discharge its employees for proper cause. The CTA notes that employees have a right to grieve discipline. The CTA's againment in disagrations. The Coalition discipline in the CTA's right to discipline and the CTA's right to discipline and the CTA's right to disciplinary procedures and that such changes are mandatory subjects of bargaining. It is the coalition that determine whether the CTA has fulfilled the proper cause requirement to discipline. I conclude that the non-interference clause does not sometime at the very of the Coalition's right to bargain regarding changes in disciplinary procedures.

Secondly, the CTA argues that the Coalition waived any right to bargain the disciplinary guidelines by its fattage as separate provides guidelines that the CTA unilaterally implemented. The CTA reasons that because it has the exclusive right to discipline employees and had a past practice of developing, implementing and revising guidelines without bargaining with the Coalition or the Coalition grieving, the Coalition waived any right to bargain guidelines.

I also reject the CTA's argument that the Coalition waived any right to bargain by facility to the previous changes in the guidelines. In NLRB v. Miller Brewing Co., 408 F. 2d 12, 70 LRRM 2907, 2909 (9th Cir. 1969), the court stated:

[I]t in any two day a right once organized and a the two is less forever [Citation omitted.] Each time the bargainable incident occurs — each time new rules are issued — Union has the election of requesting negotiations or not. An opportunity once rejected does not result in a permanent "close-

As there is no dispute that the Respondent failed to bargain over the guidelines, I conclude that the Respondent violated Section 10(a) (4) and (1) of the Act when it refused to

Accordingly, as is the Board's policy in unfair labor practices cases where the employer has unilaterally changed the wages, hours or terms and conditions of a bargaining unit, I recommend that the Board of the Responsibility in the second the second to bargain with the Charging Party in good faith upon request until such time as the parties reach agreement or a legitimate impasse.
